Purpose

Your club's newsletter or bulletin is an important communication tool for your club. Even more importantly, it helps promote friendship and a sense of family among members. It also keeps members updated on club activities and projects and provides an opportunity for members to be recognized individually for professional, personal and club accomplishments. Another less obvious but valuable objective of the newsletter is to keep members interested, involved and motivated.

Editor

Ideally, the newsletter editor should be someone with writing and communications skills who is enthusiastic about taking on the duties required of a club editor. If no one seems willing at first request, the club president might suggest that the club newsletter need not be the burden it may be perceived to be; it can be as simple as the editor chooses, with short, informative items and bits of personal news provided by the members themselves.

Content

This varies from club to club, but information may include: items of club business; project activities; program or other announcements; schedules of upcoming events; personal news about members; district activities; and information from Pilot International. Some clubs publish club minutes in their newsletters, in lieu of taking the time to read them at meetings.

Format

The newsletter can be any number of pages. Standard format is 8½" x 11" (letter paper size) which, when folded, fits easily into a business-size envelope. The newsletter should include the club name, an address, and site and time of club meeting. Pilot International policy states that information written or printed on postcards, personal or business stationery should not be substituted for a club newsletter.

Distribution

Each member of the club, as well as the District Governor, should receive a copy of each newsletter. It is suggested that copies be sent to the Governor Elect, the Region Lt. Governor, and the ECR as well.
